APHORISMS

FIRST SECTION

I. LIFE is short, the Art long, opportunity fleeting, experiment treacherous,¹ judgment² difficult. The physician must be ready, not only to do his duty himself, but also to secure the co-operation of the patient, of the attendants and of externals.

II. In disorders of the bowels, and in vomitings that are spontaneous, if the matters purged be such as should be purged, the patient profits and bears up well. If not, the contrary. So too artificial evacuations, if what takes place is what should take place, profit and are well borne. If not, the contrary. So one ought to have an eye to season, district, age and disease, to see if the treatment is, or is not, proper in the circumstances.

III. In athletes a perfect condition that is at its highest pitch is treacherous.³ Such conditions cannot remain the same or be at rest, and, change for the better being impossible, the only possible change is for the worse. For this reason it is an advantage to reduce the fine condition quickly, in order that the body may make a fresh beginning of growth. But reduction of flesh must not be carried to extremes, as such action is treacherous¹; it should be carried to a point compatible with the constitution of the patient. Similarly, too, evacuations carried to extremes are treacherous,¹ and again new growths, when extreme, are treacherous.¹

IV. A restricted and rigid regimen is treacherous,¹ in chronic diseases always, in acute, where it is not called for. Again, a regimen carried to the extreme of restriction is perilous; and in fact repletion too, carried to extremes, is perilous.

V. In a restricted regimen the patient makes mistakes, and thereby suffers more; for everything that occurs is more serious than with a slightly more liberal regimen. For this reason in health too an established regimen that is rigidly restricted is treacherous,¹ because mistakes are more hardly borne.

For this reason, therefore, a rigidly restricted regimen is treacherous¹ generally as compared with one a little more liberal.

VI. For extreme diseases extreme strictness of treatment is most efficacious.

VII. Where the disease is very acute, immediately, not only is the pain extreme, but also it is essential to employ a regimen of extreme strictness. In other cases, where a more liberal regimen is possible, relax the strictness according as the disease is milder than the most extreme type.

VIII. It is when the disease is at its height that it is necessary to use the most restricted regimen.

IX. Take the patient too into account and decide whether he will stand the regimen at the height of the disease; whether his strength will give out first and he will not stand the regimen, or whether the disease will give way first and abate its severity.

X. When the disease reaches its height immediately, regimen must be restricted immediately. When the height comes later, restrict regimen then and a little before then; before, however, use a fuller regimen, in order that the patient may hold out.²

XI. Lower diet during exacerbations, for to give food is harmful; lower diet too during the exacerbations wherever a disease is exacerbated periodically.

XII. Exacerbations and constitutions will be made plain by the diseases, by the seasons of the year, and by the correspondence of periods to one another, whether they come every day, every other day, or at a longer interval. Moreover, there are supervening symptoms; for example, in pleurisy, if expectoration supervene immediately on the commencement of the disease, it means a shorter illness, if afterwards, a longer one. Urine, stools, sweats, by the manner in which they supervene, show whether the disease will have a difficult crisis or an easy one, whether it will be short or long.

XIII. Old men endure fasting most easily, then men of middle age, youths very badly, and worst of all children, especially those of a liveliness greater than the ordinary.

XIV. Growing creatures have most innate heat, and it is for this reason that they need most food, deprived of which their body pines away. Old men have little innate heat, and for this reason they need but little fuel; much fuel puts it out. For this reason too the fevers of old men are less acute than others, for the body is cold.

XV. Bowels are naturally hottest in winter and in spring, and sleep is then longest; so it is in these seasons that more sustenance is necessary. For the innate heat being great, more food is required ; witness the young and athletes.

XVI. A sloppy diet is beneficial in all fevers, especially in the case of children and of those used to such a diet.

XVII. To some, food should be given once, to others, twice ; in greater quantity or in less quantity ; a little at a time.¹ Something too must be conceded to season, district, habit, and age.

XXI. What matters ought to be evacuated, evacuate in the direction to which they tend, through the appropriate passages.

² As Galen says, "crisis" here may mean either the exacerbation, or the summit of the disease, or the crisis in the strict sense of the word. The aphorism is so like XI. that some editors think it is an interpolation, though an early one.

APHORISMS, I. XXII.—II. v.

XXII. Purge or otherwise disturb concocted, not crude, humours, and avoid the onset of a disease, unless there be orgasm, which in most cases does not occur.¹

XXIII. Judge evacuations, not by bulk, but by their conformity to what is proper, and by the ease with which the patient bears them. Where occasion calls for purging until the patient faints, do even this, if the patient's strength be sufficient.

XXIV. In acute diseases use purgatives sparingly and at the onset, and then only after a thorough examination.

XVI. When on a starvation diet a patient should not be fatigued.

XVII. When more nourishment is taken than the constitution can stand, disease is caused, as is shown by the treatment.

XVIII. Of foods that nourish all at once and quickly, the evacuations too come quickly.

XIX. In the case of acute diseases to predict either death or recovery is not quite safe.²

XXXV. In all diseases it is better for the parts about the navel and the abdomen to keep their fulness, while excessive thinness and emaciation is a bad sign. The latter condition makes it risky to administer purgatives.

L. Things to which one has been used a long time, even though they be more severe than unaccustomed things, usually cause less distress. Nevertheless, change to unaccustomed things may be necessary.

LI. Excess and suddenness in evacuating the body, or in replenishing, warming, cooling or in any other way disturbing it, is dangerous; in fact all excess is hostile to nature. But "little by little" is a safe rule, especially in cases of change from one thing to another.

LII. When acting in all things according to rule, do not, when results are not according to rule, change to another course of treatment if the original opinion remains.

LIII. Those who when young have relaxed bowels come off better than those who have hard; but in old age they come off worse, the bowels of the old being generally hard.

VIII. In seasons that are normal,¹ and bring seasonable things at seasonable times, diseases prove normal and have an easy crisis; in abnormal seasons diseases are abnormal and have a difficult crisis.

IX. It is in autumn that diseases are most acute and, in general, most deadly; spring is most healthy and least deadly.

X. Autumn is bad for consumptives.

XI. As for the seasons, if the winter be dry and northerly and the spring wet and southerly, of necessity occur in the summer acute fevers, eye diseases and dysentery, especially among women and those with moist constitutions.²

XII. But if the winter prove southerly, rainy and calm, and the spring dry and northerly, women whose confinement is due in the spring suffer abortion on the slightest provocation, or, if they do bear children, have weak and unhealthy offspring, so that they either die at once or live with puny and unhealthy bodies. Among the rest prevail dysentery and dry diseases of the eyes, and, in the case of the old, catarrhs that quickly prove fatal.³

¹ καθεστέωσι is difficult to translate. It means "having a regular κατάστασις (constitution)," just as ἀκατάστατος means "having no regular constitution." "Fixed," "established," "regular," are partial but imperfect equivalents.

³ After κόρυζαι V Urb. and many other MSS. have χρόνιαι: some have πολυχρόνιοι. As the parallel passage in Airs, Waters, Places has πολυχρόνιοι instead of κόρυζαι, some editors would adopt that reading here. But, as Littré points out, the commentary of Theophilus implies κόρυζαι. Evidently there have been efforts to assimilate the text of Aphorisms to that of Airs, Waters, Places. Rein. has ὀξέες καὶ χρόνιοι, καὶ κόρυζαι χρόνιοι.

XV. Of the constitutions³ of the year droughts are, in general, more healthy and less deadly than wet weather.

XVI. The diseases which generally arise in rainy weather are protracted fevers, fluxes of the bowels, mortifications, epilepsy, apoplexy and angina. In dry weather occur consumption,⁴ eye diseases, diseases of the joints, strangury and dysentery.

 5 καὶ σηπεδόνες αἰδοίων, καὶ ἴδρωα.⁵

² Rein. adds τοῦ φθινοπώρου.

⁴ This is the reading of C'. M adds καὶ τεταρταῖοι, which words, apparently, were not in the texts known to Galen.

aggravating any pre-existing pain in the chest; southerly constitutions relax and moisten the body, bring on heaviness of the head, hardness of hearing and giddiness, make the eyes and the whole body slow to move, and the bowels watery.

XVIII. As for the seasons, in spring and early summer children and young people enjoy the greatest well-being and good health; in summer and part of autumn, the aged; for the remainder of autumn and in winter, the middle-aged.

XIX. All diseases occur at all seasons, but some diseases are more apt to occur and to be aggravated at certain seasons.

XX. In spring occur melancholia, madness, epilepsy, bloody flux, angina, colds, sore throats, coughs, skin eruptions and diseases,¹ eruptions turning generally to ulcers, tumours and affections of the joints.

XXI. In summer occur some of the diseases just mentioned, and also continued fevers, ardent fevers, tertians,² vomiting, diarrhœa, eye diseases, pains of the ears, ulcerations of the mouth, mortification of the genitals, sweats.

¹ It is not possible to translate the Greek terms for the various skin diseases, as the modern classification is so different from the ancient. We may be sure, however, that λέπρα included many diseases besides leprosy.

² With the reading of V, "very many tertians."

See Littré's note. V and many other MSS. read πλείστοι, which Littré adopts.

⁵ There are many interesting variants in the latter part of this aphorism. C' has καὶ αἰδύων ἡδρῶτες, and Urb. καὶ αἰδοίων ἰδρῶα, with a colon at σηπεδόνες. It gives quite good sense to take these words together, but Galen took αἰδοίων with σηπεδόνες. V reads ἰδρῶτες for ἰδρῶα. M omits καὶ before both σηπεδόνες and ἰδρῶα, and so supports the other strong testimony that αἰδοίων should go with ἰδρῶα.

APHORISMS, III. XXII.—XXVI.

XXII. In autumn occur most¹ summer diseases, with quartans, irregular fevers, enlarged spleen, dropsy, consumption, strangury, lientery, dysentery, sciatica, angina, asthma, ileus, epilepsy, madness, melancholia.

XXIII. In winter occur pleurisy, pneumonia, lethargus, colds, sore throat, coughs, pains in the sides, chest and loins, headache, dizziness, apoplexy.

XXIV. In the different ages the following complaints occur: to little children and babies, aphthae, vomiting, coughs, sleeplessness, terrors, inflammation of the navel, watery discharges from the ears.

XXV. At the approach of dentition, irritation of the gums, fevers, convulsions, diarrhœa, especially when cutting the canine teeth, and in the case of very fat children, and if the bowels are hard.²

XXVI. Among those who are older occur affections of the tonsils, curvature at the vertebra by the neck, asthma, stone, round worms, ascarides, warts,

¹ With the reading of V, "many."

² That is, have a tendency to constipation. The reading of C' is very interesting. It obviously arose from the apparent inconsistency of saying that diarrhœa occurs in children naturally constipated. So some scribe or commentator changed σκληρὰς ("hard") to ὑγρὰς ("relaxed," "watery"). But the point is that children usually constipated become very relaxed in certain circumstances.

⁸ καὶ is omitted by M. This reading would give the sense: "fat babies with a tendency to constipation."

⁹ So V and many other MSS. M has σκληρὰς before τὰς. Littré says that C' has τὰς κοιλίας σκληρὰς ἔχουσιν; it actually has τὰς κοιλίας ὑγρὰς ἔχουσιν.

¹⁰ For εἶσω ὥσπερ M has ἰσώσπερ and V ἰσώσσης.

XXIX. Young men suffer from spitting of blood, phthisis, acute fevers, epilepsy and the other diseases, especially those mentioned above.

XXX. Those who are beyond this age suffer from asthma, pleurisy, pneumonia, lethargus, phrenitis, ardent fevers, chronic diarrhœa, cholera, dysentery, lientery, hemorrhoids.

XXXI. Old men suffer from difficulty of breathing, catarrh accompanied by coughing, strangury, difficult micturition, pains at the joints, kidney ¹ σατυριασμός, the word given by all our MSS., is very difficult. None of the ancient commentators, with the exception of one scholiast, refer to it. Littré thinks that it means the same as σατυρισμοί, a word explained in the Galenic Glossary as meaning tumours by the ears. I have adopted this explanation, but at the same time I am not at all sure that satyriasis is not referred to. So Lallemand and Pappas, who would transpose σατυριασμοί and place it next to ἀσκαρίδες, on the ground that the latter often cause the former.

FOURTH SECTION

I. Purge pregnant women, should there be orgasm,¹ from the fourth to the seventh month, but these last less freely; the unborn child, in the first and last stages of pregnancy, should be treated very cautiously.

II. In purging, bring away from the body such matters as would leave spontaneously with advantage; matters of an opposite character should be stopped.

III. If matters purged be such as should be purged, the patient benefits and bears up well; otherwise, the patient is distressed.²

IV. In summer purge by preference upwards, in winter downwards.

V. At and just before the dog-star, purging is troublesome.³

VI. Purge upwards thin people who easily vomit, but be careful in winter.

VII. Purge downwards those who vomit with difficulty and are moderately stout, but be careful in summer.

XV. Ἐπὴν βούλῃ μᾶλλον ἄγειν τὸν ἐλλέβορον,

¹ ὑποστέλλεσθαι is the reading of C'. Most MSS. have some form of the participle, and Littré follows slight MS. authority, supported, however, by Galen's comment, in adding τὰς ἄνω after ὑποστελλομένους. The authority against τὰς ἄνω is overwhelming; it is omitted by C' MV and most less important MSS. Urb. has κάτω θέρος· τοὺς φθινώδεας ὑποστελλομένους. Rein. reads τὰς ἄνω with a comma at ὑποστελλομένους.

² For ὀκόσοις V has οἷσι. This variation is very common in Aphorisms and need not be noticed again.

³ V has καὶ οἱ περὶ ὀμφαλὸν πόνοι.

XI. Those who suffer from colic, pains about the navel, and ache in the loins, removed neither by purging nor in any other way, finish with a dry dropsy.¹

XII. It is bad to purge upwards in winter those whose bowels are in a state of lientery.

XIII. In giving the hellebores, those who are not easily purged upwards should, before the draught, have their bodies moistened by increased food and rest.

XX. In cases where there is no fever, should colic come on, with heaviness of the knees and pains in the loins, need is indicated of purging downwards.

XXI. Stools that are black like (black) blood,¹ coming spontaneously, either with or without fever, are a very bad sign, and the more numerous and the more evil the colours, the worse the sign. When caused by a purge the sign is better, and it is not a bad one when the colours are numerous.²

¹ Even though μέλαν is omitted from the text, it is clear that it must be understood.

² Littré suggests that in this aphorism χρώματα does not mean "colours," but "shades of black." Such an interpretation makes the aphorism more homogeneous, but no ancient commentator mentions it.

² For γίνεται Urb. has γίγνεται δείκνυται.

³ Urb. has (with Magnolus in marginē) ἣν ἦν ἂν.

⁴ αἰ C' Urb. Q. Most MSS. omit.

⁵ Two MSS. at least omit this aphorism.

⁶ V has (for δὲ ἀνισταμένοισιν) διανισταμένοισιν.

⁷ The MSS. show a great variety of readings. V has πονέει τι, M τί πονέσῃ, C' ἦν τι πονήσῃ, Q ἦν τι πονήσωσιν.

⁸ αἰ C' Q and many other MSS. But many omit.

⁹ προπεπονηκός τι Urb. προπεπονηκώς τί MV. The reading of C' and of several other MSS., προπεπονηκώς τις, is very attractive, and may be right.

XXIX. When rigors occur in fevers on the sixth day the crisis is difficult.

XXX. Diseases with paroxysms, if at the same time as the paroxysm ceases on one day it returns on the next, have a difficult crisis.¹

XXXI. When in fevers the patient is prostrated with fatigue, the abscessions form at the joints, especially at those of the jaws.

XXXII. If convalescents from diseases have pain in any part, the abscessions form in that part.

XXXIII. But if previous to an illness a part be in a state of pain, the disease settles in that part.

XXXIV. If a patient suffering from fever, with no swelling in the throat, be suddenly seized with suffocation, it is a deadly symptom.

XXXV. If the neck of a fever patient suddenly become distorted, and to swallow be a matter of difficulty, there being no swelling, it is a deadly symptom.

¹⁰ V has ἡ νοῦσος στήριζει.

¹¹ For ἐπιγένηται M has ἐπιστήι.

¹² ἐξαίφνης is omitted by V and many other MSS.

¹³ ἀποστροφῇ Rein.

¹⁴ After ἐόντος most MSS. have ἐν τῷ τραχήλῳ; Galen's commentary implies that he did not know this reading.

¹⁵ C' omits this aphorism.

² ὑποτροπιασμόν Urb. and many other MSS. ὑποστροφὴν τοῦ νοσήματος καὶ ἀνατροπιασμόν C'.

³ Urb. and many other MSS. place δὲ after σὺν.

⁴ For ὅκου V has ὅπη.

⁶ For ἢ VQ have καί. C' reads εἰ.

XXXVI. Sweats in a fever case are beneficial if they begin on the third day, the fifth, the seventh, the ninth, the eleventh, the fourteenth, the seventeenth, the twenty-first, the twenty-seventh, the thirty-first and the thirty-fourth, for these sweats bring diseases to a crisis. Sweats occurring on other days indicate pain, a long disease and relapses.

XXXVII. Cold sweats, occurring with high fever, indicate death; with a milder fever they indicate a protracted disease.

XXXVIII. And on whatever part of the body there is sweat, it means that the disease has settled there.

XXXIX. And in whatever part of the body there is heat or cold, in that part is the disease.

XL. And where there are changes in the whole body, for instance, if the body grow cold, or, again, grow hot, or if one colour follow on another, it signifies a protracted disease.¹

XLI. Copious sweat, occurring after sleep without any obvious cause, indicates that the body has a surfeit of food. But should it occur to one who is not taking food, it indicates need of evacuation.

¹ The sense is a little clearer if, with C', we omit καί, and with VQ read καί for ἥ before αὔθις: "if the body grow cold and hot by turns."

² γένηται Urb.: γίγνηται V. Other MSS. have γίγνοιτο or γίνοιτο.

XLIX. In a continued fever, if the patient's lip, eye, eye-brow or nose be distorted, if sight or hearing fail, while the body is already in a weak state—whatever of these symptoms show themselves, death is near.

L. When in a continued fever occur difficulty of breathing and delirium, it is a fatal sign.

LI. In fevers, abscesses that are not resolved at the first crisis indicate a protracted disease.

LII. When in fevers or in other diseases patients weep of their own will, it is nothing out of the common; but it is rather so when they weep involuntarily.

LIII. When in fevers very viscous matter forms on the teeth, the fevers become more severe.

¹ The reading noticed by Galen, which omits μή, would mean that if the secretions be substances that the body requires for health (τῶν συμφερόντων) evacuation will only do harm. The emendations of Ermerins and Reinhold remove the difficulties of meaning from this aphorism, and one or other is probably right. See VII. lxx. The meaning would be : “are bad if suppressed, but if properly evacuated, etc.”

Littré with two inferior MSS. transposes καὶ to before ἐς. Theophilus says that this alteration is necessary to the sense, and it seems to be the reading of Galen.

² C' has ἐκ.

turn to the lungs, die within seven days, or, should they survive these, develop empyema.¹

XI. In patients troubled with consumption, should the sputa they cough up have a strong² smell when poured over hot coals, and should the hair fall off from the head, it is a fatal symptom.

XII. Consumptive patients whose hair falls off from the head are attacked by diarrhoea and die.³

XIII. When patients spit up frothy blood, the discharge comes from the lungs.

XIV. If diarrhoea attack a consumptive patient it is a fatal symptom.

XV. When empyema follows on pleurisy, should the lungs clear up within forty days from the breaking, the illness ends; otherwise the disease passes into consumption.

XVI. Heat produces the following harmful results in those who use it too frequently: softening of the flesh, impotence of the muscles, dullness of the intelligence, hemorrhages and fainting, death ensuing in certain of these cases.

XVII. Cold produces convulsions, tetanus, blackening, feverish rigors.⁴

² Or "offensive," "fetid."

³ So Littré, who says that to translate "if diarrhoea supervenes" is inconsistent with XIV.

⁴ "Blackening" will include "mortification," but is not to be limited to it.

⁷ After ταῦτα C' has τοῖσι, which Urb. places over πολλάκις, read by it for πλεονάκις. Rein. has a colon at ταῖτα.

⁸ Urb. has γνώμης νάρκωσιν and ταῦτα οἷσι θάνατος in the margin. Galen notices four variants for the end of this aphorism: τούτοις θάνατος, ταῦτα, ἐφ' οἷς ὁ θάνατος, ταῦτα οἷσι θάνατος, ταῦτα εἰς θάνατον. Rein. εἰς θάνατον. Query: ἔστιν οἷσι.

³ μελασμούς has been suggested for μελαίνει.

XVIII. Cold is harmful to bones, teeth, sinews, brain, and spinal marrow, but heat is beneficial.

XIX. Heat parts that are chilled, except where hemorrhage threatens.¹

XX. Cold makes sores to smart, hardens the skin, causes pain unattended with suppuration; it blackens, and causes feverish rigors, convulsions, tetanus.

XXI. Sometimes in a case of tetanus without a wound, the patient being a muscular young man, and the time the middle of summer, a copious affusion of cold water brings a recovery of heat. Heat relieves these symptoms.²

XXII. When heat causes suppuration, which it does not do in the case of every sore, it is the surest sign of recovery; it softens the skin, makes it³ thin, removes pain and soothes rigors, convulsions and tetanus. It relieves heaviness of the head. It is particularly useful in fractures of the bones, especially when they are exposed, and most especially in cases of wounds in the head. Also in cases of mortification and sores from cold, of corroding herpes, for the seat, the privy parts, the womb, the bladder—for all these heat is beneficial and conduces to a crisis, while cold is harmful and tends to a fatal issue.

² The emendation τοῦτον is an attempt to get rid of the awkward plural. Perhaps the sentence is a misplaced "title" of the next aphorism.

³ Perhaps, "the body generally."

¹ Galen says he had never seen such a case, but Adams thinks that the aphorism may refer to rare cases of puerperal mania.

² These words are omitted by our best MSS. Littré keeps them, but points out that they are inconsistent with the commentary of Galen, who says that the woman must be well fed (καὶ πεπληρωῖσθαι σιτίων). He suggests, therefore, that we should either read οὐκ ἀδείπνυ in the text or μὴ πεπληρωῖσθαι in Galen.

³ The meaning of this aphorism seems plain enough, though Adams says it is not altogether confirmed by experience. The ancient commentators gave three explanations of the aphorism, and two of παρὰ φύσιν. Perhaps the meaning is: "Women, who in pregnancy are unnaturally thin, miscarry before they can recover a better condition."

child is sickly; but if the breasts be hard, it shows that the child is more healthy.¹

LIII. When women are threatened with miscarriage the breasts become thin. If they become hard again² there will be pain, either in the breasts or in the hip joints, eyes, or knees, and there is no miscarriage.

LIV. When the mouth of the womb is hard it must of necessity be closed.

LV. When women with child catch a fever and become exceedingly thin,³ without⁴ (other) obvious cause, they suffer difficult and dangerous labour, or a dangerous miscarriage.

LVI. If convulsions and fainting supervene upon menstrual flow, it is a bad sign.

LVII. When menstruation is too copious, diseases ensue; when it is suppressed, diseases of the womb occur.

LVIII. On inflammation of the rectum and on that of the womb strangury supervenes; on suppuration of the kidneys strangury supervenes; on inflammation of the liver hiccough supervenes.

¹ Galen takes the sense to be that hard (and not milky) breasts indicate a healthy child. Littré, thinking that this interpretation neglects the comparative ὕγιεινότερον, understands the sense to be that while soft milky breasts indicate a sickly child, hard milky breasts indicate a more healthy one.

² Galen says that πάλιν can mean either (1) "again" or (2) "on the other hand." He prefers the second meaning.

³ Or (with the reading of C') "feverish."

⁴ The phrase "without obvious cause" may also be taken with the preceding clause.

¹¹ πλειόνων γενομένων C'. Some MSS. have γινομένων or γιγνομένων.

¹² καὶ is omitted by C', and Urb. omits from καὶ to ἐπιγίνεται.

² As Galen says, four (not two) dispositions have been mentioned; but these can be taken in pairs, and so we get the healthy mean with respect to (1) heat and (2) dryness.

³ Moving air in the body was called πνεῦμα, which was not confined, as our word "breath" is, to air moving to and from the lungs. The writer of this aphorism was evidently a supporter of the Pneumatists, who tried to explain health and disease by the action of air.

² Only three (inferior) MSS. have καὶ. Littré inserts it following the commentary of Galen, which implies it.

LXIV. To give milk to sufferers from headache is bad; it is also bad for fever patients, and for those whose hypochondria are swollen and full of rumbling, and for those who are thirsty. Milk is also bad for those whose stools in acute fevers are bilious, and for those who pass much blood. It is beneficial in cases of consumption when there is no very high fever. Give it also in protracted, low fevers, when none of the aforesaid symptoms is present, but when there is excessive emaciation.

LXV. When swellings appear on wounds, there are seldom convulsions or delirium; but when the swellings suddenly disappear, wounds behind are followed by convulsions and tetanus, wounds in front by delirium, severe pains in the side, or suppuration, or dysentery, if the swellings are inclined to be red.⁴

² Galen notes that the writer leaves the "place" to be understood by the reader, but τοῦτον seems to refer to something already mentioned.

³ Galen objects to the last clause as inconsistent with the one preceding, and to the whole aphorism as an interpellation.

⁴ There are many difficulties of meaning in this aphorism, the chief being that wounds in front do not differ from wounds behind in their probable or possible after-effects, at any rate not to the extent mentioned in the text. See Littré's note.

LXX. Those who are attacked by quartans are not very liable to be attacked by convulsions. But if they are first attacked by convulsions and a quartan supervenes, the convulsions cease.

LXXII. Those subject to jaundice are not very subject to flatulence.

¹ That is, in swellings, etc.

² Or "crudity."

⁴ Perhaps τελευτῶσιν refers to the termination of any disease, not of fatal diseases only. So Theophilus.

³ μανίη includes every state when a person is "out of his mind." It is uncertain to which of these many states reference here is made.

⁴ Galen notices that some authorities read ἀλγήματα, "pains," a much more appropriate word in the context. Littré thinks that "referred" pains to the elbows are meant: "les brisements dans le dos font sentir dans les coudes." The reading of C' combines both readings.

⁵ Galen thinks that this aphorism is an interpellation, but takes the meaning to be that delirium replaces the fever. It seems more natural to interpret it to mean that delirium replaces the tremors.

⁴ The reading οὐ γίνονται has poor MS. support but is the one known to Galen. Otherwise one would adopt οὐκ ἐγγίνονται.

XXVIII. Eunuchs neither get gout nor grow bald.

XXIX. A woman does not get gout unless menstruation is suppressed.

XXX. A youth does not get gout before sexual intercourse.

XXXI. Pains of the eyes are removed by drinking neat wine, by bathing, by vapour baths, by bleeding or by purging.

XXXII. Those with an impediment in their speech are very likely to be attacked by protracted diarrhoea.

XXXIII. Those suffering from acid eructations are not very likely to be attacked by pleurisy.

XXXIV. Bald people are not subject to large varicose veins; bald people who get varicose veins grow hair again.

XXXV. A cough supervening on dropsy is a bad sign; but if it precede it is a good sign.

XXXVI. Bleeding removes difficulty of micturition; open the internal vein.¹

XXXVII. In a case of angina it is a good thing when a swelling appears on the outside of the trachea.

ἐνοσι(ν) after φαλακροῖσι, μεγάλοι as epithet of κισσοί, ἐπιγίνονται, οἷτοι before or after πάλιν.

XLI. When suppurating matter exists in the body without showing itself, this is due to the thickness either of the pus or of the part.

XLII. In jaundice, sclerosis of the liver is bad.

XLIII. When persons with enlarged spleens are attacked by dysentery, if the dysentery that supervenes be prolonged, dropsy or lientery supervenes with fatal results.

XLIV. Those who, after strangury, are attacked by ileus, die in seven days, unless fever supervenes and there is an abundant flow of urine.

XLV. If sores last for a year or longer, it must be that the bone come away and the scars become hollow.

XLVI. Such as become hump-backed before puberty from asthma or cough, do not recover.

XLVIII. In cases of enlarged spleen, dysentery supervening is a good thing.¹

XLIX. In gouty affections inflammation subsides within forty days.

L. Severe wounds of the brain are necessarily followed by fever and vomiting of bile.

LI. Those who when in health are suddenly seized with pains in the head, becoming² forthwith dumb and breathing stertorously, die within seven days unless fever comes on.

LII. One should also consider what is seen of the eyes in sleep; for if, when the lids are closed, a part of the white is visible, it is, should diarrhoea or purging not be responsible, a bad, in fact an absolutely fatal, sign.³

LIII. Delirium with laughter is less dangerous, combined with seriousness it is more so.

LIV. In acute affections attended with fever, moaning respiration is a bad sign.

¹ Cf. the forty-third aphorism of this section, where it is said that in such cases a protracted dysentery is followed by fatal results.

² The reading κείνται would mean "lie prostrate." This word is very appropriate in its context, as apoplectic seizures are referred to.

LV. Gouty affections become active in spring and in autumn.

LVI. In melancholic affections the melancholy humour is likely to be determined in the following ways: apoplexy of the whole body, convulsions, madness¹ or blindness.

LVII. Apoplexy occurs chiefly between the ages of forty and sixty.

LVIII. If the epiploön protrude, it cannot fail to mortify.²

LIX. In cases of hip-joint disease, when the hip-joint protrudes and then slips in again, mucus forms.

LX. In cases of chronic disease of the hip-joint, when the hip-joint protrudes, the leg wastes and the patient becomes lame, unless the part be cauterised.

SEVENTH SECTION.

I. In acute diseases chill of the extremities is a bad sign.

¹ See note on p. 185. The word σημαίνει (if the reading be correct) will be almost impersonal, "it means."

² Galen and all commentators refer this aphorism to abdominal wounds through which the epiploön protrudes. The words added in Urb. mean "and drop off." The epiploön is the membrane enclosing the intestines.

X. In ileus, vomiting, hiccough, convulsions or delirium are a bad sign.

XI. Pneumonia supervening on pleurisy is bad.⁴

XII. Phrenitis⁵ supervening on pneumonia is bad.

XIII. Convulsions or tetanus supervening on severe burns are a bad symptom.

² By ἔκστασις is meant an increase of the maniacal symptoms, helping to bring the disease to a crisis.

³ Probably meaning "showing signs that κρᾶσις is absent."

⁴ If κακὸν be omitted: "Pneumonia often supervenes on pleurisy."

⁵ Phrenitis means here either (a) the form of malaria called by this name, or (b) some disease with similar symptoms.

XXV. Convulsions following on purging are deadly.

XXVI. In violent pain in the parts about the belly, chill of the extremities is a bad sign.

² Galen says that ρύσις means either (a) the falling out of the hair or (b) diarrhoea.

³ These words must be understood, as they easily can be in a list of aphorisms giving "bad" symptoms.

⁴ Galen states that this aphorism applies, not to any bone, but to severe fractures of the skull piercing the membranes. I have done my best to use the most appropriate prepositions to translate ἐπὶ in aphorisms XVII. to XXIV.

XXVIII. Whatsoever bone, cartilage or sinew be cut through in the body, it does not grow.²

XXIX. When in the case of a white phlegm³ violent diarrhoea supervenes, it removes the disease.

XXX. In cases where frothy discharges occur in diarrhoea there are fluxes from the head.⁴

XXXI. In fever cases sediments like coarse meal forming in the urine signify that the disease will be protracted.

XXXII. In cases where the urine is thin at the first,⁵ and then becomes bilious, an acute illness is indicated.

XXXIII. In cases where the urine becomes divided there is violent disurbance in the body.⁶

XXXIV. When bubbles form in the urine, it is a sign that the kidneys are affected, and that the disease will be protracted.⁷

² A repetition of Aphorisms VI. xix.

³ I.e. incipient anasarca.

⁴ This medically obscure aphorism should be connected with the doctrines expounded in the latter part of Sacred Disease.

⁵ Galen and Theophilus give this meaning to ἄνωθεν, and Adams adopts it. Littré translates, “à la partie supérieure,” but Galen says he had never seen urine watery above but bilious below.

⁶ The word διεσθηκότα perplexed Galen, who took it to mean “not homogeneous”; Adams thinks that it refers to a strongly marked line of distinction between the sediment and the watery part.

⁷ Adams explains this as referring to albuminuria. Medically ἐφίστανται (“settle on the surface”) is the better reading, as albuminous urine is frothy. But the MS. authority for ἐν and ὑφίστανται is strong.

¹² Urb. has δξείην for μακρὴν.

APHORISMS, VII, XXXV.-XXXIX.

XXXV. When the scum on the urine is greasy and massed together, it indicates acute disease of the kidneys.¹

XXXVI. When the aforesaid symptoms occur in kidney diseases, and acute pains are experienced in the muscles of the back, if these occur about the external parts, expect an external abscess; if they occur more about the internal parts, expect rather that the abscess too will be internal.

XXXVII. The vomiting of blood, if without fever, may be cured;² if with fever, it is bad. Treat it with styptics or refrigerants.

XXXVIII. Catarrhs (fluxes) into the upper cavity³ suppurate in twenty days.

XXXIX. When a patient passes in the urine blood and clots, suffers strangury and is seized with pain in the perineum and pubes, it indicates disease in the region of the bladder.

² This meaning of σωτήριον (θεραπευθῆναι δυνάμενον) is vouched for by Galen. The word should mean "salutary."

³ That is, the chest.

ἑπτα περιόδοισι τὸ μακρότατον. M has τριταῖος . . . μακρότατον. τὰ ὀξέα τῶν νοσημάτων γίνεται κ.τ.ε.

¹⁰ Galen mentions two readings, τὰ περὶ τὴν κύστιν νοσέειν σημαίνει, and τὴν κύστιν νοσέειν σημαίνει. M has κτένα καὶ τὴν κύστιν. νοῦσον σημαίνει. Urb. omits this aphorism.

APHORISMS, VII. XL.-XLVI.

XL. If the tongue is suddenly paralysed, or a part of the body suffers a stroke, the affection is melancholic.¹

XLI. If old people, when violently purged, are seized with hiccough, it is not a good symptom.

XLII. If a patient suffers from a fever not caused by bile, a copious affusion of hot water over the head removes the fever.²

XLIII. A woman does not become ambidexterous.³

XLIV. Whenever empyema is treated by the knife or cautery, if the pus flow pure and white, the patient recovers: but if muddy and evil-smelling, the patient dies.

XLV. Whenever abscess of the liver is treated by cautery or the knife, if the pus flow pure and white, the patient recovers, for in such cases the pus is in a membrane; but if it flows like as it were lees of oil, the patient dies.

XLVI. In cases of pains in the eyes, give neat wine to drink, bathe in copious hot water, and bleed.

¹ The ancient commentators are at a loss to understand why paralysis is "melancholic," i.e. caused by black bile. Perhaps, as μελαγχολία may mean merely "nervousness," the aphorism means that persons of a nervous temperament are peculiarly subject to "strokes."

² The reading of V suggests, "relieves the headache."

³ Some ancient commentators took this aphorism literally; others thought that it referred to the position of the female embryo in the womb; others to the belief that a female is never an hermaphrodite.

ὀφθαλμῶν ὀδύνας· ἄκρατον ποτίσας καὶ λούσας πολλῶ θερμῶ. φλεβοτόμει. Urb. So V, but with ἄκρητον.

ὀδύνας ὀφθαλμῶν ἀκρητοποσίη· ἢ λουτρόν· ἢ πορίη. ἢ φλεβοτομία λύει· M.

These three readings throw light upon the history of the Hippocratic text. They could not possibly be descendants of a single text copied with the ordinary copyist's blunders.

² Galen says that there were two forms of this aphorism, but gives only one, which omits ἢν ὑγιεῖ, so that we can only guess what the other form was. He blames the way in which the meaning is expressed. This, however, is obvious enough, and is well illustrated in Regimen in Acute Diseases.

³ Galen finds fault with the comparative, and thinks that a superlative is wanted to contrast with ἥκιστα.

⁴ Galen criticises this aphorism. The word ξύσματα, he says, is inappropriate to urinary evacuations; while if it applies to stools, the aphorism does not tally with fact. Some old commentators would join this aphorism to the following by means of a καί. As Littré points out, the aphorisms in this part of the work, however just Galen's criticisms may be, were known at least as early as the age of Bacchius.

APHORISMS, VII. LXXXIV.—LXXXVII.

LXXXIV. When in patients suffering from quartan¹ fevers there is bleeding at the nose, it is a bad symptom.

LXXXV. Sweats are dangerous that do not occur² on the critical days, when they are violent and quickly forced out of the forehead, as it were in drops or streams, and are very cold and copious. For such a sweat must be attended with violence, excess of pain and prolonged pressure.

LXXXVI. In a chronic disease excessive flux from the bowels is bad.

LXXXVII. Those diseases that medicines do not cure are cured by the knife. Those that the knife does not cure are cured by fire. Those that fire does not cure must be considered incurable.

In the MSS. C' and V, before the beginning of Prognostic, occur the following fragments, which Littré discusses in Vol. I. pp. 401 and following. He considers that most of the passage belongs to the work Sevens. The first sentence, not found in C', is Aphorisms V. ix. The interesting point about the addition of such fragmentary passages to the end of a book is, that compilations like Nature of Man and Humours may have grown by a repetition of a like process.

Consumption usually occurs between the ages of eighteen and thirty-five. The symptoms that normally³ occur in consumption are all violent, while some are actually mortal. Secondly, if the patient be ill in the <kindred> season, the very season is an ally of the disease; for example, summer of ardent fever,¹ winter of dropsy. For the natural element wins a decisive victory. For a more fearful symptom is the tongue becoming black, dark and blood-stained. Whatever of these symptoms is not present, it shows that the lesion is less violent. The signs of death. These are the symptoms that in acute fevers must foretell the death or recovery of the patient. The right testicle cold and drawn up is a mortal sign. Blackening nails and toes cold, black, hard and bent forward show that death is near. The tips of the fingers livid, and lips dark, pendulous and turned out, are mortal symptoms. The patient who is dizzy and turns away, pleased with quiet and oppressed by deep sleep and coma,² is past hope. If he is slightly raving,³ does not recognise his friends, and cannot hear or understand, it is a mortal symptom. Vomiting through the nostrils when he drinks is a mortal symptom. When patients are about to die these clearer symptoms occur. Immediately the bowels swell and are puffed up. The boundary of death is passed when the heat of the soul has risen above the navel to the part above the diaphragm, and all the moisture has been burnt up. When the lungs and the heart have cast out the moisture of the heat that collects in the places of death,¹ there passes away all at once the breath of the heat (wherefrom the whole² was constructed) into the whole again, partly through the flesh and partly through the breathing organs in the head, whence we call it the "breath of life."³ And the soul, leaving the tabernacle of the body, gives up the cold, mortal image to bile, blood, phlegm and flesh.⁴

¹ I.e. Summer heat makes the heat of fever worse, and the wet of winter is bad for the water of dropsy.

¹ "The places of death" might mean either (a) the vital parts or (b) the places fatally attacked by disease.

² Is "the whole" the individual organism or the universe? The first instance of τὸ ὅλον seems to refer to the individual, the second to the universe. Perhaps the warm life of the individual is supposed to be re-absorbed into the cosmic warmth. See, however, the next note.

⁴ Notice the poetic language (τὸ τοῦ σώματος σκῆνος, τὸ ψυχρὸν καὶ τὸ θνητὸν εἶδωλον). The words σκῆνος and εἶδωλον suggest Orphic thought.
